The Ethics of In-Home Geriatric Care Management

Community-based care managers face complex challenges when working with older adults. Unlike working in a clinical setting, the care manager must confront ethical dilemmas in the home of older adults, without the immediate support of colleagues. Care managers broker health and human services and the nature of care is less tangible. This course explores everyday ethics in the context of care manager dynamics in the home of the older adult. This class is a component of the new Geriatric Mental Health Care Management Certificate (page 10).

Learning Objectives

• Describe the definition and meaning of “aging in place”
• Explain the definition and meaning of ethics
• Explain the ethical challenges of community-based care management
• Summarize the guiding principles of ethical decision making
• Utilize alternative approaches to ethics
• Explain the conceptual principles of “caring and everyday ethics”
• Describe guidelines for setting professional boundaries in care management
