Beyond Death Comes for the Archbishop, Building the Cathedral in Santa Fe
In 1851 Father Jean-Baptiste Lamy, a French priest, entered the frontier capital of New Mexico. Lamy’s dream of building a cathedral was fictionalized in Willa Cather’s great novel, Building the Cathedral. While the cathedral has become the symbol of Santa Fe, its pageantry is a metaphor for cultural imperialism. The Civil War and Emancipation in the American Midwest
This course will examine the destruction of chattel slavery in the United States from the vantage point of actors who had not yet had the present-day American Midwest, or what was then known as the “Old Northwest,” or broader still, “the West.” What role did the Midwest’s people and places have in shaping the Confederacy? How might their stories help us better understand the Civil War and its legacies?
Instructor: Jesse Gant, a PhD candidate in UW-Madison’s history department. His dissertation examines political activism in the Old Northwest throughout the Civil War era.
