

Attend relevant, up-to-date continuing education classes to improve outcomes for your clients and patients. Earn continuing education hours for the ethics and boundaries component of your licensure renewal requirements.

UW–Madison's Division of Continuing Studies is an approved continuing education provider for the American Psychological Association (APA), Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB), and National Board for Certified Counselors (NBCC), and classes qualify as accredited university continuing education courses relevant to other professional practice. Contact your own board or organization for specific CE requirements.

The Science of the Mind

Mon, Dec 4, 9am-3pm, lunch provided
The American Club, Kohler
$175 through Nov 22, $195 after
6 CE hours (0.6 CEUs)
Level: Advanced

Keeping up to date with the latest science behind brain imaging and stimulation, neurochemistry, and genetics is a challenge. Learn about some of the latest science driving our research and leading to new treatments of the major mental disorders. Explore brain anatomy and function as revealed by functional MRI scans, as well as a new understanding of the human biome.

Learning objectives:

- Summarize evidence that the mind creates the world rather than recording it
- Describe fundamentals of neuroanatomy relevant to mental health practitioners
- Observe brain imaging technology and brain stimulation
- Discuss new avenues in instrumental intervention

Documentation, Ethics and Boundaries

Tue, Dec 5, 9am-3pm, lunch provided
The American Club, Kohler
$175 through Nov 22, $195 after
6 CE hours (0.6 CEUs)
Level: Intermediate to advanced

Documentation is a long-neglected but crucially important aspect of mental health practice. Rather than reducing risk exposure, the electronic medical record exposes clinicians to more privacy and boundary concerns. The internet and social media have also changed the professional landscape. Learn why and how to document, examine the concept of confidentiality in medical records, and discover how search engines, email, and social media are changing our understanding of therapeutic boundaries.

Learning objectives:

- Discuss the importance of documentation and how electronic medical records have affected this practice
- List how to conduct and document a suicide and violence risk assessment
- Assess the ethical issues involved in telemedicine
- Describe key ethical dilemmas big data and data mining bring to the mental health field

The American Club, a five-star hotel, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Ethics, Professional Boundaries, and the Law

Mon, Sep 25, 9am-3pm, lunch provided
Pyle Center, UW-Madison
$175 through Sep 15, $195 after
6 CE hours (0.6 CEUs)
Level: Advanced

All mental health professional organizations have standards defining ethical practice. Learn about the relationship between legal and professional standards in this context. Explore legal principles such as informed consent, confidentiality, the right to refuse treatment, provider conscience clauses, and dual agency (e.g., duty to protect, communications with third parties).

Learning objectives:

- Summarize how different professional standards reflect different professional priorities
- Recognize the legal cases that define informed consent, duty to protect, and confidentiality
- Describe various ways electronic health records are pushing the field from a confidentiality standard to a privacy standard
- Discuss concerns about professional boundaries that conscience clauses may raise

Instructor

David Mays (MD, PhD) is a forensic psychiatrist and directed the forensic program at the Mendota Mental Health Institute in Madison, WI for 13 years. He serves on the clinical faculty at UW-Madison. Dr. Mays is the recipient of the Exemplary Psychiatrist Award from the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, the Distinguished Service Award from the Alliance for the Mentally Ill of Dane County, and the Exceptional Performance Award from the Wisconsin Department of Health and Family Services.
